“Healthy you makes a Healthy Baby”

Empowering ethnic minority women and women from new communities to take control of their own and their children's health.

A child and maternal health service brought to you by FWT - a centre for women in conjunction with NHS Coventry and Coventry City Council.

'MAMTA' - means "motherly love" in many South Asian languages - is a health project for black and minority ethnic women.

The aim of MAMTA is to empower these women to take control of their own and their children's health. One of the main aims of MAMTA is to work with health professionals on improving child and maternal health, in Foleshill and its surrounding areas, through advice and education.

MAMTA support mainstream services, such as midwifery, health visiting, smoking cessation in pregnancy and other services within the City Council and NHS Coventry in cascading key health messages to the community.

The activities of MAMTA target local health inequalities by addressing the root causes of ill health, removing barriers such as culture and language and offering a safe environment to support and advise women on health matters.
