Use visual support as much as possible e.g. showing them what you want them to do.

Praise your child for good listening.

Play games that help develop concentration and listening skills you might need to make.

Call your child’s name to get their attention first before giving an instruction.

When giving instructions to your child, split it into short chunks to make it easier to process.

Use simple language.